

Summer 2025 - Activity ideas and events in and around London

This table compiles various activities and events in and around London accessible to autistic children, teenagers and young people, along with their corresponding web links and teaching ideas. This resource can be helpful for parents, educators, or anyone seeking to plan outdoor activities or visits, particularly for children or individuals with specific needs such as autism.

Activity	Web Link	Admission	Teaching and Learning Ideas
Visit to the British Museum	link	Free	Prepare children by discussing exhibits they might see. Use the visit to connect classroom learning with real-world artifacts.
Natural History Museum: Space Exhibition	link	Paid	Explore interactive exhibits. Encourage children to engage in related science activities post-visit.
Jamie Oliver Cookery School	link	Paid	Participate in cooking classes to learn about healthy eating and measuring.
UNIQLO Tate Play at Tate Modern	link	Free	Use workshops to express emotions through art.
Science Museum Early Birds	link	Free	Interactive session for children with SEND. Reinforce scientific curiosity.
Walk in Hyde Park	link	Free	Identify flora and fauna. Reflect on sensory experiences.
Discover Children's Story Centre	link	Paid	Attend storytelling sessions. Encourage related creative activities.
Southbank Centre's Multitudes Festival	link	Free / Paid	Celebrate diversity through workshops. Create home art inspired by experiences.
LEGO Store, Leicester Square	link	Free	Promote creativity and motor skills through building challenges.
Free Drawing Classes at The National Gallery	link	Free	Enhance creativity and expression. Discuss art together.
Picnic at Holland Park	link	Free	Prepare meals together and enjoy Kyoto Garden. Discuss nature and culture.
Visit to the Victoria and Albert Museum	link	Free	Link exhibitions to classroom topics.

Please note that the suitability of these activities and resources may vary according to individual needs and circumstances. Families are advised to assess the appropriateness of each activity for their child's needs and preferences. We do not assume any liability or responsibility for any difficulties, accidents, or damages that may occur as a result of engagement in these activities or use of these resources. Please also ensure to check each activity's website for key information, safety measures, and guidelines beforehand for a safe and enjoyable experience.